

“We are excited to expand our network to others with the same passion and to be a part of a group that supports and enriches one another.”

A word from our President Lori Arnold on being a Women Owned Business

When I started A2S back in 2016, I hit the ground running focusing on providing not only Architecture but the greatest level of service possible to all my clients. As the years have passed and our business has found its own niche within the Architecture and Design industry, we stood apart from other firms with not only our small boutique size and agility, but our obligation to stop and listen. This sounds so second nature, but it goes well beyond hearing the project needs and instead discovering the essence of our client. Once you can understand where they are coming from culturally, as a company and as individuals, you are equipped to tackle their task whether it be design, logistics or just plain problem solving. This is where we thrive as women owned and operated, receiving information and processing it through the lens of others is at the heart of A2S and each of its employees. We view listening as an obligation to our clients as well as an asset that we actively embody.

We are excited to expand our network to others with the same passion and to be a part of a group that supports and enriches one another. By engaging with WBENC we have not only discovered some exceptional businesses, but also a system of women that are there for advice, support, motivation and most of all inspiration.
